As I understand it, Past Simple (the second sentence) is possible here only as the simplest version of Present Perfect (the third sentence), isn't it? But why is Present Perfect more ...

I think that's the simplest way to describe the difference between these two words that you can possibly come up with.

The only case in which I could see any of them causing confusion would be if the person you were speaking with was only just beginning to learn English as a second language and might ...

Should I use most simple or simplest to indicate something cannot be more simple? Can I use both? Is one preferred? If simplest - how is that pronounced? (Is the e silent?)

Instead of "good" you need a different word or phrase. Perhaps the simplest would be "fine". Now since the patient isn't fine now, you should use a past tense "He was fine". But if you are ...

The adjective "simple" might have many meanings. Some dictionaries say "a simple person is stupid"; 8 STUPID [not before noun] someone who is simple is not very ...
